We are delighted with the further improvements in standards at Jebel Ali Primary School and congratulate all children on their achievements.

The children deserve the warmest congratulations for their hard work and for these wonderful achievements - and, of course, it is important to remember that we are not a selective school and that we cater for children with a wide range of abilities, and these abilities vary between the different core subjects. We are particularly proud of all our children.

The results are, of course, a cumulative outcome of seven years of excellent teaching by all members of staff at Jebel Ali and my thanks and congratulations go to all our teachers for their hard work and dedication. It is fair to say that you can all be very confident in the education your children receive!

It is important to remember, however, that these results are only part of the story about JAPS. Excellent education includes far more than the basic skills measured by the national tests. Children at JAPS achieve these results alongside many other high quality activities - drama, music and sport - which enrich their lives, and ours, enormously. It is worth remembering that many schools are only able to undertake such activities on an occasional basis, if at all. Here at JAPS they are integral parts of school life. You, our parents, can be confident that your children are receiving an all-round education of the very highest quality here.
